Defensive Batteries Gain Praise For Their Part In Balking Germans

BERLIN, Sept. 4—Defeat of British Royal Air Force raiders in a major air clash over German soil was announced by the Nazi high command today following a new onslaught against the German capital.

British planes flew over Berlin at midnight, sending the population to air raid shelters, but no bombs were dropped. At the same time, according to German sources, squadrons of British bombers were caught by Nazi fighters and anti-aircraft fire between Berlin and Magdeburg and sent packing back across the face of Europe.

LONDON, Sept. 4—Two more air raid warnings sounded in London today as Royal Air Force planes, in a series of spirited battles, drove back German raiding craft which crossed the southeast coast and lashed out against the British capital.

The second warning came when 40 Nazi bombers, escorted by fighters, attempted to enter the Thames Estuary. They were driven back over the North Sea by anti-aircraft and R. A. F. fighters. One German plane was shot down. Earlier, two Heinkel bombers, accompanied by six fighters, dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs at a point on the southeast coast.

An official statement said: "This morning two forces of enemy aircraft crossed the southeast coast."

"One attempted to bomb airdromes in Kent and the other force, after crossing the Thames Estuary, made a similar attempt against airdromes in Essex. "The enemy was promptly engaged by our fighters and anti-aircraft. Only a few of them succeeded in penetrating our defenses."

"Only a few bombs were dropped and so far as is known there was no serious damage and no casualties." One German raider was shot down by R. A. F. planes in a brief battle over a southeast inland area this afternoon. No bombs were dropped.

20 In Formation
At another point, 20 Nazi planes were sighted flying at an altitude of 20,000 feet in formation. Anti-aircraft opened up and British fighters went into action. The formation broke up when Spitfires and Hurricanes appeared.

Soon afterward, a new anti-aircraft barrage opened up over the southeast coast when new detachments of German planes were seen at a great height.

"Reversed" Twins Studied

Conscription Foes Seek Draft Delay Of 60 Days

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—Congressional foes of conscription, facing predicted defeat, today pinned their hopes on a battle in the house for an amendment postponing the draft for 60 days in order to give the volunteer system of military enlistment a further trial.

The amendment, which failed by a two vote margin in the senate conscription fight, will be offered in the house tomorrow by Rep. Fish (R) N. Y.

Under its terms, the President would first call for 800,000 volunteers. He would be authorized to draft men only if the volunteer quotas remained unfilled after a 60-day period.

Administration leaders, however, rejected all compromise proposals as they sought to push the conscription bill to passage. Even bitter foes of the measure conceded that it will pass the house by a comfortable margin.

The house plunged into its second day of debate on the bill today, with the controversy deepened by President Roosevelt's dramatic action in transferring 50 destroyers to Great Britain without asking congressional sanction.

Foes See Gains
Conscription foes asserted that the President's action would strengthen their forces and swing many votes from the draft bill. After an uproarious start, house debate assumed a more sober (Continued on Page Two)

RAMEY INFANT MONTH'S FIRST IN CIRCLEVILLE

A seven pound girl born at 10:55 p. m. Tuesday, September 3, is Circleville's first in September. The child is the first born to Mr. and Mrs. David Ramey of Clinton Street, Dr. V. D. Kerns, the attending physician, reported. The child was born in Berger Hospital.

Prizes to be awarded to the parents and the child include: A quart of milk free for two weeks to the family and the new baby, by the Blue Ribbon Dairy. A month's pass to the Clifton Theatre, by the management.

A lovely floral tribute, by Brehmer Greenhouses. One carton of six 60-watt lamps, by the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co.

Three Taken In Louisiana; Hostages Grabbed During Flight Released

TWO OTHERS GET AWAY

Motorist Kidnaped By Pair; Two Girls, Youth Held During Escape

COLUMBIA, La., Sept. 4—

Three of five escaped Arkansas convicts, their path to freedom blocked by one of the greatest posses ever organized in Louisiana, today peacefully surrendered.

In surrendering, the convicts released the hostages that they had kept in their custody.

The hostages released were Gladys Diamond, 16, and Jerry Harriall, 17. Earlier, 16-year-old Vonelle Williams gained her freedom when, after attempting to make a bargain with possmen in order to gain her own freedom and the freedom of her two young companions, she returned to the woods and found the convicts had fled.

In capturing the convicts not a single shot was fired.

Special Deputy Ed Drake said they threw down their guns and came out with their hands "high in the air."

"The convicts came out," Drake said, "when the Angola trusty guards tracked them down in the swamps and had them surrounded. There was just nothing for them to do—either surrender or be killed."

Crowd at Courthouse

State police immediately took the three convicts into custody and hustled them off. Hundreds of persons milled about the Columbia courthouse. The convicts were taken away in belief they were in danger.

STRANGE STORY OF RESCUE OF BABY UNFOLDS

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 4—Mrs. G. B. Allison, aunt of Lorraine Allison hitherto believed to have perished as an infant in the S. S. Titanic disaster, today was considerably interested in the story of an American housewife who believes that she, saved by a gallant rescuer, may be Baby Lorraine Allison of 1912.

The strange sequence of events that may result in establishment of the American woman's identity was first disclosed yesterday in an International News Service dispatch from Washington.

Mrs. Laurence Kramer, of Berkeley, Mich., anxious to comply with the United States alien registration act, asked American authorities to aid in determining her identity.

Believing she had been born in England, Mrs. Kramer wrote to the man she believed her father asking for her birth certificate. Back came the answer—the man was her foster father, a fellow passenger with her own father, "H. J. Allison of Pennsylvania," on the ill-fated Titanic.

Allison, her foster parent wrote, had placed her in her rescuer's arms, perishing himself while his (Continued on Page Two)

Destroyers Being Sent To Boston In Preparation For Transfer

BOSTON, Sept. 4—Shrouding all movements in secrecy and acting with great despatch, the United States navy today had rushed the major portion of its 50 over-age traded destroyers through Cape Cod Canal to Boston for quick delivery to Great Britain via Canada.

With 25 of the war vessels reported to have passed through the canal in the last four days and with ten more reportedly going through today, Boston became the key point in the transfer effected by President Roosevelt in exchange for important naval and air bases on British territory in the Western Hemisphere.

Although navy officials refused to comment, it was indicated that the destroyers had been bunched in squadrons of four each for a northward dash to Canada.

Strict silence was maintained to prevent any possible leak as to what course the destroyers would take out of Boston and what port in Canada would be their destination. All orders were sent direct to destroyer commanders by radio from Washington.

While navy officials maintained strictest secrecy, it was learned that 12 of the reconditioned destroyers already are at the Charlestown navy yard. Two of them, the Goldsborough and the Welles, have been in East Boston drydocks undergoing overhauls. The others will be refitted and groomed.

First contingent of the destroyers may sail from Boston next Friday, manned by their regular crews, for a secret destination in Canada where they will be turned over to Canadian sailors for the voyage across the Atlantic to England.

It was considered probable that all of the destroyers scheduled to go to Britain, would put in at Boston for a quick overhaul before going to Canada.

The destroyers, all four-stackers, are of 1,200 tons, waterline length of 311 feet, 27,000 maximum horsepower and a speed of 35 knots. They are equipped with four five-inch guns and one three-inch gun in addition to a dozen 21 inch torpedo tubes using torpedoes of the same design as the British.

The Goldsborough and Welles are both post-first World War vessels.

PAYNE YOUTH ESCAPES LANCASTER B. I. S. AGAIN

Hobart Payne, 18, of Circleville, sent to Boys' Industrial School, Lancaster, for a series of breaking-in jobs in Circleville stores, escaped with two other inmates of the school Sunday. State highway patrolmen announced Tuesday that they had not yet discovered the boys.

Others who escaped with Payne were Willard Gusman, 17, Athens, and Donald Jordan, 17, Sciotoville. Two other boys, Charles Ward, 16, Xenia, and William Barnes, 17, West Union, fled the institution Monday, school authorities reported.

Payne had previously broken away from the institution, but had been returned.

Troops Guard Buildings; Reports Of Iron Guard Plot Differ

BERLIN, Sept. 4—The Romanian cabinet headed by Premier Gigurtu resigned today, according to a DNB dispatch from Bucharest. King Carol summoned General Antonescu to form a new ministry.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 4—Troops stood guard at all public buildings in Romania's tension-gripped capital today following a series of riotous incidents, including an apparent attempt to assassinate King Carol.

With soldiers occupying strategic points the city was outwardly calm, but tension and apprehension were evident beneath the surface as popular resentment kept rising against cession of half of Transylvania to Hungary, as dictated by the Rome-Berlin axis.

(According to reports in Budapest, the attempt to assassinate Carol was carried out by a young Iron Guardist in uniform who fired several shots at the royal palace in Bucharest, shouting: "Down with Carol!")

Reports from Cluj, historic Transylvania capital, said Romanian troops were retiring from the ceded territory in orderly (Continued on Page Two)

TRIO ARRESTED FOR ROBBERIES, OTHER CRIMES

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 4—Three bandits were in custody today after having confessed, according to authorities, to a series of armed robberies, kidnappings and automobile thefts in Springfield, Dayton, Tiffin and Findlay.

Police Chief George A. Able identified the men as Willard Morgan, 24; William Orville Nelson, 28, and Robert A. McCutcheon, 19, all of Dayton.

According to Chief Able, the trio allegedly confessed robbing William Keeton, 25, manager of a Springfield gasoline station of $25 and then kidnapping him. After he was released, police said, the bandits robbed and kidnapped Herman Buckman, a Tiffin station attendant, who was also released several miles in the country.

At Findlay, according to the alleged confession, the trio robbed Raymond Wittenmyer, 22, of $136. Wittenmyer was also "taken for a ride" before being released, officials said.

Berlin Greeted Pact Between Britain And United States As Important Step In Liquidation Of Once-Great Empire

NO ATTACK MADE ON WASHINGTON

Reich Refraining From Any Action That Might Push Nation Nearer Actual Participation In Europe's War

HAMBURG, Sept. 4—An inferential charge that the United States violated neutrality by exchanging fifty American destroyers for British naval bases was voiced today in the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, official mouthpiece of the German foreign office.

In an editorial, written by Adolf Halfeld, chief editorial writer, the newspaper said:

"It cannot be overlooked that the deals were made possible through an autocratic act by competent quarters in Washington who apparently forgot that the American Neutrality Act prohibits the sale of war material to belligerents."

(Editor's Note: Under existing law, sale of American war material to belligerent nations is not prohibited. However, such sale is on a cash-and-carry basis, with the contracting nation furnishing its own ships for transport of implements of war. By presidential proclamation, all American craft are forbidden to enter the war zones.)

"An extremely realistic business policy was adopted from the view point that acquisition of valuable British strategic positions was worth the flagrant violation of neutrality."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—The House heard a warning today that the exchange of United States destroyers for naval and air bases on British possessions in the Atlantic Ocean was "clearly an act of war and it is merely a question of whether Germany and Italy will strike back now or later."

The warning was voiced by Rep. Smith, Republican of Ohio, who charged that the deal violated the American law and the 1907 Hague Conference against unneutral acts.

BERLIN, Sept. 4—A sharp new warning that England and the British Empire face collapse under a relentless pounding by the Rome-Berlin axis was voiced today by Adolf Hitler in a speech that opened the Nazi winter relief fund campaign.

Hitler said: "I know only one date and that is the date for the collapse of England."

BERLIN, Sept. 4—"First step in liquidation of the British Empire" was the manner in which German officialdom today greeted the Anglo-American destroyer-naval base deal.

Carefully avoiding any mention of how the agreement affects American neutrality, a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman said:

"Germany notes that the most valuable areas of the British Empire are being thrown away for fifty old destroyers. This enables us to make certain deductions as regards British strength. We see in this the first step in liquidation of the British Empire."

Britain has sold its birthright for a "mess of pottage", the spokesman declared, and spoke with sarcasm of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's remark that the United States had "accepted with pleasure" the British bases.

"This is evidence of the unselfish solidarity of the Anglo-American democracies," he said.

Late this afternoon, Berlin newspapers for the first time published reports of the agreement on their front pages under the general headline "Sell-Out Of The British Empire."

All studiously refrained from attacking the United States, most of them ridiculing England. The Lokalanzeiger said:

"For 50 old tubs which are hardly seaworthy, England practically pawns and sells sovereign rights to her possessions. So low has England sunk that she would (Continued on Page Two)

LONDON HEARS MORE WARNINGS OF BOMB RAIDS

Spirited Battles Result In Attackers Being Put Back Over Channel

The British defenses the Germans used mixed tactics today. The Nazi planes came over in formations ranging from two bombers, escorted by six fighters, to 40 bombers, convoyed by 80 fighting planes.

Reports reaching London from all of the raid targets stated that the defensive anti-aircraft batteries were earning new honors and proving remarkably effective.

Aided by perfect weather, the batteries were breaking up the large formations of Nazi warplanes and forcing the raiding machines to keep their distance until the arrival of radio-summoned British fighters.

The anti-aircraft batteries, which sent up a virtual curtain of shrapnel, played a major part in turning back the planes that swept up the Thames Estuary in an attempt to reach the capital.

The roaring guns held the planes at bay until the arrival of British fighters, who broke up the formation and shot down two Nazi planes.

It was impossible to estimate the number of German planes employed in today's widespread raids although preliminary reports from the coastal areas indicated that the number was considerably less than were employed in the mass aerial assaults of yesterday.

Eye-witnesses of one of today's aerial battles over a southeast inland area reported that three enemy planes were seen to crash.

Another German bomber, badly damaged by anti-aircraft fire in a northeast coast town, was believed to have crashed into the sea. No bombs were dropped in this area.

fashion and that the atmosphere there was calmer.

These reports added that Julio Magist, former Romanian premier and Peasant Party leader — a dogged opponent of concessions to Hungary — had decided to withdraw from the ceded region and carry on resistance from Romanian territory.

Adding to the general state of jitters, air raid warning sirens screamed in Bucharest at 1:30 a. m. Authorities stated the warning was sounded "without cause."

Amid reports that the disorders were part of an alleged Iron Guard plot to overthrow King Carol's regime and put his son, Crown Prince Michael on the throne, the Iron Guard organization today continued its vigorous campaign against the enforced settlement with Hungary.

Pamphlets were distributed in the streets demanding establishment of a "tribunal to try those guilty of the catastrophe which has befallen the country."

The Romanian interior ministry issued a statement saying that a young man in uniform had fired several pistol shots in front of the royal palace and had been arrested immediately.

(Editor's Note: The London Daily Express published a Bucharest dispatch stating three unidentified assailants attempted to take the palace guard by surprise. One managed to reach the driveway leading to the palace and fired seven shots at a lighted window before he was surrounded and overcome, the Express said.)

The interior ministry asserted that the government is in complete mastery of the situation.

(Reports received in Budapest, Hungary, said some of the Romanian demonstrators had been killed. Hundreds were reported under arrest.)

FOREIGN OFFICE RAPS TRANSFER OF DESTROYERS

even be ready, in even of defeat by Germany, to sacrifice her entire grand fleet to the United States."

The general Nazi attitude seemed to be one of determination to prevent England "from provoking the Reich into an outburst against the United States and pushing the latter further along the path to war."

Further Decline Noted

Diplomatic Correspondence, organ of the foreign office, said that the deal marked definite decline of Britain as a world power.

"The empire is on the retreat for the first time since the days of George Washington," the circular said. "The United States apparently is about to inherit British power and rule."

German repercussions, if any, are expected to take the form of new intensification of Nazi air attacks against England "to smash the enemy quicker than it can rally with any American aid."

Additional Bases Sought By U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—Determined to insulate the Western Hemisphere against "nations seeking world conquest," the United States prepared today to acquire additional air and naval bases in both Atlantic and Pacific areas.

With the nation apparently approving President Roosevelt's momentous exchange of 50 overage destroyers for the right to establish defense outposts on eight British possessions along the Atlantic seaboard, diplomatic officials indicated that further measures to fortify the new world are impending.

The official attitude of the State Department is that "in the face of increasing danger," and with some nations possibly embarked on a program of world conquest, it is necessary to move quickly in consolidating defenses in this hemisphere.

As the army and navy prepared to ask congress for funds to start construction of military facilities in Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad, British Guiana, and Antigua negotiations for bases in Brazil, Venezuela and other Latin American areas were reported to be in progress.

American defense experts are anxious to obtain an aviation base in northern Brazil to buttress defense centers in the vicinity of the Panama Canal. Sources close to President Roosevelt reported that strengthening of the defenses at Greenland also is desired by the American government.

ROME, Sept. 4.—Italy cannot remain "disinterested" over the Anglo-American destroyer-naval base deal, official Italian spokesmen declared today.

No hint of any possible retaliatory action was given. But while the Italian press fulminated in even more stronger fashion than Berlin newspapers, high quarters in Rome interpreted the move as one of outright American military assistance to Great Britain.

Virginia Gayda, the authoritative Fascist editor, declared the agreement increased the risk of American involvement in the war. "We knew long ago," Gayda wrote in the Giornale d'Italia, "that Britain and France were preparing to finance the war by means of colonial concessions to the United States, but we did not imagine the first step would be taken so soon."

"These old destroyers will soon be sunk and won't suffice for Britain's needs, which are primarily airplanes, food, munitions and oil."

"It is a curious bargain, a hard blow to British pride and a confession of Britain's great naval losses. It is a typical example of bankrupt liquidation of the British Empire, but the deal increases the risk of American participation in the war and confirms the commercial basis of Anglo-American 'solidarity.'"

"German attacks on Britain have not reached their maximum. They do not represent the total offensive means at disposition of the axis."

tone, but a tense atmosphere and air of bitterness prevailed.

Rep. Smith (D) Conn. predicted approval of his compromise for the senate draft-industry amendment, which was flayed by Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell Willkie. Under the Smith amendment, the President can only commander, not condemn, industrial plants for the duration of the draft law if they fail to agree to produce munitions. Compensation to the plants is compulsory.

Rep. Vinson (D) Ga., chairman of the naval affairs committee, sought a further modification, which would require the National Defense Commission — composed largely of businessmen — to advise the President when an industrial plant has failed to cooperate in the defense program. Plant seizure would be postponed until the commission had a chance to induce the plant owner to accept an order.

OHIO ADJUTANT DENIES RUMORS ABOUT TROOPS

COLUMBUS, Sept. 4.—Unsubstantiated reports from Washington that the War Department contemplates mobilizing the Ohio National Guard on October 16 for a year's training were discounted as speculation today by Adj. Gen. Gilson D. Light, head of the Ohio guardsmen.

The Ohio national guard has received no intimation whatever that it will be called to duty on the October date or at any other definite date, the adjutant general revealed.

He placed the mobilization reports, later disproved, that the Ohio guardsmen would not be mustered out after their training period in Wisconsin.

Anticipating passage of the conscription bill now pending in congress, the adjutant general is making preliminary plans for local conscription setups, but until the measure finally passes strict secrecy will shroud these plans, General Light said.

English town a German high explosive bomb crashed on a house today, virtually demolishing it. Rescue workers approached the ruins, making a routine search for dead or injured occupants. As they poked through the wreckage they suddenly heard a whimper. Pushing aside a mass of debris they found a baby, only a few months old, absolutely uninjured.

Prior to kidnapping Hinton, the two convicts had made an unsuccessful attempt to seize the car of Mrs. Zeke Williams.

Until late yesterday, an airplane was used to scout the territory surrounding the area where the convicts were thought to be, and authorities said none could have fled the swamp without being seen. Last night, the district was surrounded and the possums lit fires and carried torches, awaiting daylight to push into the woods in force.

Meanwhile, 10 of the 36 convicts who fled from the prison farm were accounted for. Nine have been recaptured, and Conley was shot.

OHIOANS STAND AGAINST DRAFT BILL IN HOUSE

Nearly All Representatives Regardless Of Party To Vote "No"

SOME SOLONS BITTER

22 Members Of Delegation Listed As Opposed; Two For Measure

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 — As the conscription bill fight opened in the house today, it appeared that the Ohio congressional delegation will be in the vanguard of the opposition to the measure.

Twenty-two of the 24 members of the delegation now are listed as opposing the draft bill, with administration leaders making a strong effort to persuade some Democratic members to drop their opposition before the vote on Friday.

An "anti-conscription belt" — beginning with Ohio and angling westward to the Pacific Coast — apparently will furnish the strongest opposition to the bill.

Ohio's neighboring state of Pennsylvania, however, appeared to react differently to the draft proposal. A preliminary canvass indicated that most Democratic members of congress from Pennsylvania, at least, will support the bill.

Some Bitter

Some Ohio members are bitter against the legislation, while others merely say that it is unjustified at this time.

Reps. Harter of Akron and Kirwan are expected to support the bill.

"This bill," said Rep. Smith (R) Ohio, "means the overthrow of the Democratic principle that is the basis of our entire form of government and constitution."

"I am against it because at this time particularly it gives an opportunity to the political forces that have, in the last few years, been instituting measures for confiscation of private property, to greatly intensify this activity."

"It is the final power needed for communistic forces within the government to completely overthrow the system of private enterprise and establish the totalitarian state."

Rep. Secrest, Democrat, agrees that the issue, having been raised, should be determined. But he is against the bill.

"I think we can get volunteers faster than we can produce equipment, if we place the enlistment period at one year and increase pay of soldiers to $30 a month," he said.

Rep. Jenkins, dean of the Republican delegation, expects all Republicans to oppose the bill.

"We have never yet had a conscription law in time of peace," he said. "Taking over of the National Guard gives us 700,000 to 800,000 men, which is a larger number than can be clothed, housed and equipped for the winter."

Equipment Inadequate

Rep. Lewis, Republican, said that he would oppose the bill because the army has inadequate equipment.

"It does not have clothing in sight, it does not have modern rifles, tanks and machine guns to train the men," he said. "If we provide a one year enlistment period and raise the base pay to $30 a month, and then make a real drive for volunteers, I am satisfied that we can get as many as the army can equip for modern warfare."

"It has been shown that modern warfare is highly mechanized and the man power needed is less than formerly."

Rep. Elston, Republican, as a member of the military affairs committee, is expected to be one of the leaders in the fight against the bill. Rep. Harter, also a committee member, is expected to aid in the fight for it.

"I have a great deal more respect for the United States army than I had 30 days ago," State Representative William D. Radcliff, remarked Wednesday following his recent return from a thirty day business and professional men's military training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana.

While at the camp, Radcliff, along with 68 other business and professional men from Ohio, and nearly 100 others from three neighboring states, was given a month's military instruction and drill.

OFFICIAL PROBE OF BILLINGSLEY DEATH PLANNED

COLUMBUS, Sept. 4—An official inquiry was all that remained today before a close can be written to the disappearance more than three years ago of Veri H. Billingsley, 45, assistant director of ticket sales at Ohio State University, and two men companions.

Bodies of Billingsley, James Shadrach, 36, and Robert Blair, 44, were found in Billingsley's car in the Scioto River a mile north of Fishinger's bridge.

The trio dropped from sight on March 27, 1937. Since then, police have investigated leads and innumerable clues from all over the United States.

Strange as the disappearance itself was the manner in which the automobile was discovered. Eugene Streby, 71-year-old bricklayer, was fishing on the river Sunday and when he pulled up his anchor he noticed oil came to the surface. Streby said he dreamed about dead men in the water that night and got up about 2 a. m. because he could not sleep. Finally, he decided to go to police headquarters.

Police were skeptical but, because of Streby's sincerity, investigated. A diver located the car and on its right side in about 25 feet of water.

When pulled from the river, the bodies of the three men, badly decomposed, were discovered. Officials said, however, there was no doubt of the identification of the bodies.

Detour Around Crossing To Be Marked; Other News Of Community

By S. D. Fridley
Ashville, Phone 79

The village council was in session Tuesday evening paying bills and acting on other matters which needed their attention. Improvements are being made to the N. & W. railway roadbed in this territory and includes the trackage through the village. The foreman of the work crew appeared before council explaining that the crossing at Main Street is to be improved and asked that traffic be detoured away from that point for two days. The request was granted and work will be started on the work soon. The habit of double auto parking on the streets is to come to a halt if council action means anything. And the sidewalks over the village which are in need of repair are to get that very thing if Village Dad orders count.

School News

The first day of the school year 1940-41 saw better than an average enrollment both in the Grades and the High School, especially the latter as the following figures show:

Grade	Boys	Girls	Total
I	19	10	29
II	11	17	28
III	20	15	35
IV	16	16	32
V	19	17	36
VI	19	13	32
VII	18	13	31
VIII	14	10	24

Grand Totals	136	111	247
IX	24	22	46

XI	10	25	30
XII	13	14	27

High School Totals 69 71 130

Total for both schools . . . 205 182 387

In addition to the above pupils there are twelve or fifteen others who are seemingly waiting for the attendance officer to escort them to school which will probably bring the full enrollment to the 400 mark in time.

Those who are entering the First Grade this year are, as near as the teacher can determine their names as follows: Kenneth Gillwater, Leslie Barton, Harry Kennedy, Joseph Edwards, Rachael Younklin, Jean Miller, John Sturgil, Ralph Sampsil, Robert Tigner, Ann Louise Thompson, John Johnson, Laurence Nance, Phyllis Bozman,

Miss Nelson and Mr. Carter have been made official news gatherers for the Grade and High Schools respectively and if the other teachers and the pupils will turn in such items as they think of interest they will see that they are edited and published.

WHY WE ARE ARMING

SOME American commentators are now asking just why, and for what, we Americans are arming. Are we arming to insure a British victory, or to make ourselves strong without regard to the European war, or what?

Doubtless both of these considerations move us, and also the danger sensed in the Pacific from Japanese activity. But our rearming movement so far seems instinctive rather than clearly logical.

The nation has suddenly sensed danger on many fronts, in a changed world, and is rushing to arm itself for whatever may come on any front.

VETERAN SHIPS ON THE JOB

IT'S big news for American sailors and patriots, that two veterans of the United States Navy are in commission again. The famous old sailing ships, Constitution and Constellation, launched in 1797 and preserved as sacred relics for more than a century, are now officially listed once more as "in service."

These old sailing vessels will not actually join the modern fleet of steel and steam, but they will be serving their country again just the same. The Constitution has been lying in Boston Harbor and the Constellation at Newport. Americans would be glad to have a look at them today in many seaports. It will matter little now that they once fought against the naval power of Britain, in the war of 1812, and the British themselves will honor them.

SUMMER ACTIVITIES

YOU can't say Americans haven't been doing anything this summer. Along with our more familiar follies, a New York observer finds, we have been engaged in activities like these:

To begin with, we are still great walkers. A man in Mudville, N. J., walked two miles to turn in a fire alarm. A man in Troy, N. Y., walked twice to New York City, 616 miles, to see about enlisting in the army. A San Francisco man walked 2,500 miles to attend a convention in Boston.

Then a fellow swam 114 miles in Florida, and a fellow in California swam 353 feet under water without coming up to blow, and two softball teams in Milwaukee played 1,250 innings in 19 hours, and a man in Orangeburg, S. C., passed 317 worthless checks, and an 84-year-old man in Delaware cut a new set of teeth. Of all these feats the last was probably the most sensible.

And this is but a tiny fraction of what goes on in the good old summer time, in

WORLD AT A GLANCE

SUMNER WELLES, undersecretary of State, is considerably talked of as a possible successor to Secretary Cordell Hull as head of the state department — not in that immediate future but after President Roosevelt's reinauguration, if he's reelected.

It doesn't seem very likely, however, that Secretary Hull will be ready to retire as soon as that, provided the White House tenant wins in November. And it's still less likely that, unless he chooses to quit, he'll be asked to do so.

It's the consensus in Washington that he's been an admirable cabinet premier. In particular, his handling of Uncle Sam's relationships with the Latin American republics is recognized as having been wonderful. That he's getting rather old (he's nearing 70) is the only imaginable reason why he might wish to resign. That, too, looks like an improbability. He's in an excellent state of preservation and it's well known that his present post has suited him completely. That it's said, is why he preferred not to accept a vice presidential nomination; he'd rather be state secretary than vice president.

So the chances would appear to be that no vacancy will be available for Undersecretary Welles' early promotion, no matter what happens on next election day. Nevertheless, Sumner should make a first-class state secretary, as a diplomat he's more or less whenever the opportunity does present itself. Diplomacy has been his life's work. He's trained to it and he has the ability to go with training. And he also is a Latin-American expert. I knew him initially when he was first secretary of our embassy in Buenos Aires. He practically ran the embassy, under a chief who was one of our amateurs in the profession. He's immensely popular with our southern neighbors.

BILL BULLITT AN ASPIRANT
William C. Bullitt, our ambassador to Germany-vanquished France, recently arrived here to report to the president concerning European conditions, isn't exactly talked of (by others) as a prospect for the state secretaryship, but it's current gossip that he himself has an eye on the position.

I've known Bill likewise, since the days when he was an ordinary Philadelphia newspaperman. Yet he wasn't so ordinary, either. He was a scion of one of the first families in the Quaker City, and if one didn't know it he mentioned the circumstance. As to Latin America?—if ever he was south of the Rio Grande I never heard of it. He's quite familiar with Europe, though. He knows it both as a tourist and as one of our ambassadors in an old world capital or two.

As a diplomat he's more or less

EXPERTS REVISE PRICE PLAN

WASHINGTON — The much-discussed M-day Plan of the Army, covering economic mobilization in the event the country goes to war, has quietly undergone drastic revision—the fourth since the plan first appeared in 1931.

Neither the European war nor Hitler's totalitarian methods, however, were responsible for the latest change. What forced it were certain economic studies made by experts of the monopoly investigating committee of Congress, known officially as the Temporary National Economic Committee (TNEC), which shattered one of the M-day Plan's basic principles.

The plan contemplates a system of rigid price controls, particularly on commodities, in order to prevent profiteering and disruption of civilian economy. Under the 1939 version the price of wheat, for instance, would have been fixed at a low figure. Now selling at 60 cents a bushel, wheat would be pegged at around that price.

TNEC experts, backed by AAA officials, objected to this. They pointed out to the Army that not only would this be highly unfair to farmers, but it would help throw the economic system out of kilter by reducing farm purchasing power and also discouraging further raising of grain at a time when it was urgently needed.

FARMER'S GAIN

The economists advocated that this price fixing aspect of the plan be junked, and instead that established governmental agencies, familiar with the farm problems, be utilized to handle price and production questions. Strengthened by the broad powers granted in the Plan, these agencies could see that justice was done to the farmer while at the same time prices were kept in hand.

The Army agreed and this revision, which in the event of war would mean hundreds of millions of dollars to farmers, was incorporated in the plan.

Another TNEC recommendation incorporated in the Plan is for the "spacing" of war orders. The Army and Navy have thousands of orders all ready to shoot the moment the country goes to war. Hundreds of plants, under the "educational order" system in operation for several years, have machinery ready to produce the arms, munitions and other material that will be needed.

TNEC experts pointed out that a deluge of such orders would have serious economic repercussions. They advised a "spacing" system under which prices and supplies could be more easily controlled without impairing the production of goods.

DECENTRALIZING ARMS INDUSTRY

The TNEC also was responsible for the recent change in Army specifications permitting manufacturers to bid F. O. B. factory instead of F. O. B. point of destination.

TNEC studies of Army purchasing methods showed that under this old practice a premium was placed on concentration.

DIET AND HEALTH

Our Latest Allies In Germ War

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE MEDICAL journals for the past two years have devoted their space largely to accounts of the action of sulfanilamide on various diseases. This new drug seems to answer the requirements for "the magic bullet" recently exploited on the movie screen—a drug which is deadly for germs, but does not harm the human tissues in which the germs are growing. We have had a number of these bullets for the protozoan diseases—quinine for malaria, for instance, and ipecac for amoebic dysentery. All of our experience, such as it was, indicated that the magic bullet for germs would be a dye (mercurochrome is a familiar example), and sulfanilamide is a form of dye.

There seems to be no doubt now that in many infections it does do that magical thing—when absorbed into the blood, it kills or stops the action of infective living germs while doing no harm to the living blood cells or body cells in the midst of which the germs are growing.

Effective in Many Infections

The list of diseases in which the new drugs have been found useful is long. Most of them are due to the kind of germs known as cocci. A coccus is round sometimes they grow in chains as the streptococci; sometimes in clusters as the staphylococci; sometimes in pairs, as the pneumococci.

Sulfanilamide is very effective against streptococcal infections, even those hitherto considered fatal—such as blood-stream infections. In scarlet fever, which is probably due to a streptococcus, it works wonderfully, and in middle ear infections in children the results are so good that in one hospital I know of the number of mastoid operations last year were cut in two as compared to previous years.

In pneumonia the saving in life has amounted to from 50 to 75 per cent. A form of the drug closely related and called sulfapyridine has, however, proved more effective than sulfanilamide itself. In certain forms of pneumonia hitherto considered almost invariably fatal, the death rate has been cut to 10 or 15 per cent, and while the final summary of results does not quite justify the statement made a year or two ago by a prominent physician that "Now, no one need die of pneumonia," still the results have shown great improvement.

Action a Mystery

Staphylococcal infections are usually seen on the skin in the form of boils or carbuncles. But when the staphylococcus does invade the blood, it is a much more serious condition than streptococcal invasion. Another form of the drug, sulfathiazole, has proved more effective than the original in these conditions.

No one knows certainly just how the drugs act. There are two schools of thought—one which believes that they kill or inhibit the action of the germs by direct action, the other which believes they stimulate the tissues to furnish unfavorable ground for the germs' growth.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mrs. R. S. Louis, Mo.—"Please write an article on diseases of the tongue. I have had a stinging, burning sensation on my tongue for a year. I know it is the result of an old irritation."

Answer—Burning, stinging tongue is much more likely to be the result of derangements of the blood—anaemia—or poor nutrition than local irritation. The use of liver, potatoes, whole wheat bread and fresh fruits helps, as well as attention to any bad teeth or snags in the mouth.

Reader—"What would you advise to use in an atomizer for a nasal spray for the relief of a catarrhal condition that often partly closes nostrils during sleep?"

Answer—Neo-synephrin inhalant, or 1 per cent ephedrine inhalant. Do not use a heavy oil, such as liquid petrolatum in a medicine dropper as this may get down in the lungs and cause trouble.

Returning from a nerve-racking assignment, Gun Cotton, famous Scotland Yard agent, goes to Sleightner's Egyptian Ray-Bell, where he becomes interested in a mysterious stranger named Pullinger, who is wearing a tattooed Egyptian symbol. Pullinger is met by a beautiful flame-haired girl at the swimming pool in the bath. Gun calls another agent, Coffa Prescott, to trail Pullinger. The agent sees Pullinger again meet a flame-haired girl and trails the pair, but loses them. Gun goes to visit a friend and meets a girl with flame-colored hair who apparently came out of his friend's house.

CHAPTER 11

GUN RANG the bell, and the door was opened by a man-servant. Yes, Mr. Watson was expecting him. In the hall Gun's keen sense of smell detected the very faintest trace of a perfume. So she had come from there.

Watson, stoutish, bluff, hearty and well groomed—every inch the prosperous city man, even to the rather fat and obviously expensive cigar—was already in the billiard room, and greeted him cordially. "Good fella! So glad you've turned up. Now, what about a drink, eh?"

"Thanks!"

"You shall have it, my boy. And I don't mind telling you I've some of the right stuff here—genuine pre-war, and no fakemint!"

Rollo Watson was one of those men who, whatever may be required, always has "some of the right stuff," be it food, drinks, smokes or even stock-and-share or racing information.

"How about a cigar? I've got . . ."

Gun had just thrown one away in the street.

"Thanks, I'd rather have a cigar."

"Of course, old chap. Here, try one of these. They're made exclusively for me by a Russian chap in Regent street. The real thing, my boy!"

Gun stifled a sigh, and took one. Watson was a good fellow, he thought, but a little oppressive at times.

The balls were set up, and Gun broke, neatly, knocking the red at the extremity left of the pyramid, but muffed his shot on the blue.

"Speaking of the real thing," he said, he chalked his cue. "Who was the rather charming girl who left just as I came in? I've an idea I've seen her before somewhere, but I can't place her."

Watson had already neatly pocketed a difficult red, and followed up with the color. But now he missed a comparatively easy shot rather badly.

"Damn! Then . . . ?" He was looking puzzled, much too puzzled.

"Yes, a girl with rather remarkable hair. She took the taxi I came in . . ."

Revelation seemed to come to Watson.

"Oh, she! She's the secretary of a fellow I'm doing some business with. Came around to get my sign in nature to some papers, that's all. I've forgotten her name!"

Gun scattered the reds without putting one down, thinking as he did so that whatever he might say of his whiskey and cigars, Watson's attempts at evasion were not by any means the real thing.

However, he dropped the subject, not feeling particularly interested in Watson's relations with women, though the girl had certainly rather interested him.

They played for a couple of hours, and Gun at the finish was the loser by a pound or so, which seemed to give Watson more satisfaction than the occasion warranted. Then he suggested a final drink in his smoke room.

The walls were plastered with photographs, mostly of a person or sporting nature—Watson riding, Watson shooting, fishing, playing polo (taken some years before, that one), golfing, etc.

Gun evinced some interest in one

"Who was the rather charming girl who left just as I came in?" Gun asked.

of a long, low, two-storied building, with a thatched roof.

"Interesting looking place!" Gun commented.

"Oh, that! Yes, that's my place down at Chenham, in Essex, you know. Rather a jolly little place, as a matter of fact. I use it mostly for duck hunting—that marshy, fenny country is fine for duck shooting. Get the real thing there, my boy!"

"Ah, yes, Chenham, of course," Gun murmured, reflectively. "You told me about it once before, I remember. I'd like to go along one of these days when you're down there, if you can find room for me. I'm rather keen on duck shooting, and I don't get many opportunities of indulging."

"Why, of course, old chap!" responded Watson, with his usual heartiness. But it struck Gun that the tone was a little forced, and that he was slightly embarrassed.

"Just at present, though," he went on, "I'm afraid it can't be done. Can't get down there myself, as a matter of fact. The place is in the hands of the builders—that confounded roof has been leaking like hades all through the rains we've been having, and the place is as wet as a sponge. But a bit later . . ."

"Just some time!" said Gun.

But he felt certain that, for some reason, Watson didn't want him to go down there, and almost mentioned that he might be visiting Chenham within the next few days—but stopped himself in time.

Later, when he got home, he found Toni in bed, and a weary and disgruntled Prescott awaiting him in the study, wrapped in an air of considerable gloom.

"I'd almost like you to kick me, Mr. Cotton!" he growled. "I can tell you I've been kicking myself metaphorically ever since it happened! Of course, I was a damned fool, but I wish I knew where and how those two disappeared like that. I hung around till nearly midnight, and never saw another sign of them."

"Ah, well," said Gun, "accidents will happen—even to the most expert sleuths! I suppose you know what happened at that tombstone shop?"

"No idea"—Prescott shook his head gloomily—"except that when they came out they looked as though the interview hadn't been satisfactory!"

"Oh, by the way, what was the girl like?" asked Gun, when he had listened to a detailed description of Prescott's disastrous showing.

"Oh, very smart, if you know what I mean. She'd got wonderful hair, almost the color of real flames, and a fine complexion. Spoke well, too—every word and syllable distinct. That's what makes me think she's an actress—that and her walk. I thought perhaps a mannequin at first, but when I heard her speak I plumped for the actress theory. I'll bet she's had lessons in elocution, anyway!"

"Ah!" commented Gun, thoughtfully. "By the way," asked Prescott, "With some anxiety, 'what about X? Do I have to report to him?' 'No, you needn't bother. I'll drop in there in the morning and tell him all you've told me.'"

Prescott heaved a sigh of undisguised relief.

"Thank goodness for that. I'll have to admit I didn't feel much like telling him the story—it's not one I'm exactly proud of, you know!"

Gun laughed.

"Don't worry, man. There are worse troubles at sea!"

"I dare say. But the Erixton road isn't exactly a sea! It's more—more of a slough of despond, to me, anyway . . ."

When Prescott, still glooming, had taken his leave and departed, Gun thoughtfully selected a cigarette from his case and flicked his lighter into action. Various rather nebulous ideas were buzzing around his brain in a somewhat trying confusion.

A man without a passport—Cazleton—Chenham—Watson's shooting box—two girls with flame colored hair who spoke like actresses . . . Or was it just one and the same girl . . . ? Bit of a coincidence if it was . . . And yet—was it so much of a coincidence after all?

X had mentioned Chenham and Cazleton in connection with foreigners getting into the country without passports. Chenham had reminded Gun of Watson. The girl with the hair, presuming that it WAS the same one, had been with Pullinger, the man without a passport, who was somehow connected with Chenham, and had later been at Watson's house, who was also connected with Chenham . . .

There were links here, Gun felt, that could be made into a connected chain, if one had the key to fasten them with. He wished X would talk a trifle more, and felt that he would like to have a look at Chenham.

And then, there being nothing else to do, he went to bed and slept on it.

Saltcreek Grange Has Teachers' Reception

More Than 100 At Tuesday Eve Gathering

A reception honoring the teachers of Saltcreek Township School was included in the plans for the Tuesday meeting of Saltcreek Valley Grange in the school auditorium, when 84 grangers and 25 juveniles gathered for the session. Many additional guests joined the group for the social hour, which was concluded with a delightful lunch served by the September refreshment committee.

Elmer Strous was acting master the charter being draped during the business session for the late Mrs. Bertha Judy, wife of Orley Judy, worthy master of the grange. Roll call was answered by naming a favorite flower.

The program opened with a welcome song, after which Harold Strous, school superintendent, presented the teachers, including Miss Margaret Chilcote, Miss Jeannette Hockman, Miss Florence Jenkins, Todd Mitchell, Miss Jeanne Morris, Chester A. Roush, Ralph Scott and Miss Dorothy E. Van Voorhis.

M. E. Noggle of West Union Street showed color pictures of the lovely wild flowers of the vicinity as well as many varieties grown by himself and Mrs. Noggle in their home flower garden.

Three members by the grange band and several selections by a string orchestra of visitors were other features of the entertainment.

It was decided and announced before the end of the meeting that the grange would have its annual picnic at the school building September 15.

Westminster Bible Class

About 20 members and guests attended the first fall social session of the Westminster Bible Class of the Presbyterian Church Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Earl Wolfe, Jackson Township. Mrs. J. B. Stevenson, Mrs. W. A. Downing, Mrs. Arthur Steele and Mrs. Carl Hunter were assisting hostesses for the evening. Masses of lovely summer flowers were used in the rooms of the home.

Mrs. G. I. Nickerson, class president, opened the meeting and led the group in repeating the Lord's Prayer.

It was announced that the next meeting, October 1, would be at 1 p. m. at the home Mrs. James Adams when the members of the class would work on sock dolls for the Westminster Missionary Circle to send in the Christmas box to Martins Ferry. Plans for the November meeting were also discussed, this session to be held jointly with the Presby-Weds.

Mrs. Charles Smith, treasurer, submitted her report and Mrs. Walter Downing acted as secretary in the absence of Mrs. B. T. Hedges.

An illustrated talk on the Yellowstone National Park by Leslie Pontius was a feature of the evening's entertainment.

Miss Josephine Wolfe assisted her mother and the other hostesses in serving light refreshments at the close of the meeting.

Teachers Honored

Miss Georgia Bowers and Miss Eliza Plum of Ashville were honored Monday at an afternoon bridge party given by Mrs. Edwina Bowen and Miss Kathaleen Creager at the Creager home in that community.

Miss Plum will teach in the schools near Medina, while Miss Bowers has accepted a teaching position in Sandusky.

Mrs. J. E. Courtwright and Mrs. Harold Cameron, high scorers, took home the lovely bridge favors. Miss Plum and Miss Bowers were presented farewell gifts by the hostesses.

At the end of the games, a salad lunch was served.

The guests were Miss Plum, Miss Bowers, Miss Helen Bowers, Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Courtwright, Miss Geraldine Conard, Miss Martha Mary Brinker, Miss Ruth Courtwright, Ashville; Mrs. Clyde Bresler of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss Betty Baum of Philadelphia, Pa.

The new Mrs. Hershey has been a frequent visitor in the Liston home.

Logan Elm Grange

A program of music and readings interested the members of Logan Elm Grange Tuesday, about 60 being present to enjoy the entertainment arranged by Mrs. Marvin Dreisbach, acting lecturer for the meeting. The session held at the Pickaway Township School was in charge of Hoyt Timmons, worthy master, who conducted the ritualistic opening service.

Plano solos by Miss Helen Wilson, Miss Dorothy Hinton and Loring E. Hill, and readings by Mrs. Planché Kerns, Miss Worthie Anderson, Mrs. C. O. Kerns, Mrs. Eva Dreisbach and Miss Anna Pontius were included in the hour of entertainment.

Miss Mary Jane Kreisler conducted a true or false contest. Inspection of the grange is scheduled for the next meeting, the plans including refreshments at the close.

OBITUARY

Hugh George McManamay, son of Thomas and Mary Hurdle McManamay, was born June 26, 1882 and died at the age of 57 years, 2 months and 1 day. He lived his entire life in Pickaway County.

He was united in marriage to Miss Anna Hurdle November 25, 1907. He was a kind and generous husband, whose qualities of faith, hope and charity were known to his many friends.

Mr. McManamay was a member of the Circleville Methodist Church and could be likened to the immortal Will Rogers in that he never met a person he did not like. He was associated with the Scioto Valley Traction Co. and later the Ohio Midland Power Co. for 24 years. The Eagle Lodge remembers him as a member for many years.

Besides his widow he is survived by his father, Thomas McManamay, Circleville, Ohio; three nieces, Mrs. Frances Brown and Mrs. Harold Troutman of Columbus, Ohio; and Mrs. Louis Hill of Chicago, Ill.; three nephews, Harold, John and John Schucker of Columbus, Ohio, and many other relatives and friends.

I know not what the future hath, Of marvel or surprise; Assured alone that life and death His mercy underlies.

And so, beside the silent sea, I wait the muffled ear; No harm from Him can come to me On ocean or on shore.

Sophomores May Grab Varsity End Positions

Possibility that sophomores will hold down the end positions when Circleville High School opens its football season Friday, September 13, against Columbus Holy Rosary was seen Wednesday with Dud Smallwood and George Trego taking over the first string spots on Coach Roy Black's varsity, and defying anyone to try to oust them.

Smallwood and Trego, both husky and both relishing the going when it gets toughest, looked good in Tuesday's lengthy practice session. They were at the wings during the entire session. Smallwood is a little the faster of the two and possibly a little the better pass snagger, but Trego's ruggedness and his willingness to mix it in addition to his punting ability put the two boys on an even scale.

Kiwanis Elect School Man As Next President

Carl D. Bennett Chosen; Herschel Hill, Robert Hedges Officers, Too

ARMY MEN ON PROGRAM
Program For Fall Festival Announced; Lancaster Visitor Next Week

Carl D. Bennett, Walnut Township, superintendent of the Walnut Township School, was elected Tuesday evening by the Circleville Kiwanis Club to serve as president in the next year. Mr. Bennett's election was unanimous, no opposition being offered. He will succeed Don H. Walker.

Although the officers do not change until the first of the year the election is conducted in September so that new officers may be sent to the state Kiwanis convention in Akron in October.

Other members of the 1941 official staff will be Herschel Hill, South Court Street, vice-president, and Dr. Robert E. Hedges, North Court Street, treasurer. The new board of directors, which includes J. Wray Henry, Joe W. Adkins, Harold Limbach, Renick Dunlap, Tom Renick and Homer Reber, will select the secretary. Luther Bower is serving in that position at present.

The club heard an interesting address by Captain E. W. Chester of Columbus on the War Department's program to increase the army personnel to 400,000 men. He spoke of various phases of the plan, declaring that politics was delaying the National Defense program.

Captain Chester, who is in charge of recruiting in the corps area that comprises Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia and Kentucky, discussed the opportunities provided for young men without dependents in the army. He spoke, also, of numerous personal experiences in Uncle Sam's army.

Dr. B. N. Coers was introduced during the evening as a new member of the club.

Kiwanians enjoyed an excellent country style fried chicken dinner, prepared by the Pickaway Country Club caterers.

Promotion for the annual Collins Festival series was distributed, the fall events to be conducted October 30, November 6, 13 and 20.

The festival this year will include the Knickerbocker Quartette, Max K. Gilstrap, ranger-naturalist; Raymond Sheetz and Co., magicians and the play "The Big Pond", offered by a New York cast.

Next Monday evening will find the Lancaster club coming to Circleville to entertain the local club, the dinner being the prize for winning the softball series between the two clubs. Teams from the two clubs have competed for the last three years, the Circleville team winning each time.

OHIO HOSPITAL CLERK TO SERVE LONG PRISON TERM

GALLIPOLIS, Sept. 4—Byron C. Bodimer, former assistant clerk at the Ohio Hospital for Epileptics, today faced three terms in Ohio penitentiary after he pleaded guilty to charges of grand larceny, forgery and embezzlement of the institution funds.

Judge W. R. White, in passing sentence, criticized the State Welfare department for "permitting irregularities at the institution and for failure to collect on bonds given by employees."

He sentenced Bodimer to one to seven years on the charge of forgery; one to 80 years for grand larceny, and one to 10 years for embezzlement, the terms to run concurrently.

He's Air Hero

CAPTAIN George Price, above, has just been awarded the distinguished flying cross for heroism while testing a new type army plane at Buffalo, N. Y., last January. When the retractable landing gear jammed, Price did not take to his parachute but skillfully landed the ship in deep snow thus saving the army what is represented as two years' research and development.

BRITISH CHEER F. D. R.'S MOVE

News Is Best For Empire Since Dunkerque, Say English Papers

LONDON, Sept. 4 — Britain's press today joined officials and civilians in joyfully hailing the exchange of United States overage destroyers for naval and air bases on British possessions in the new world.

While the British admiralty moved swiftly to take over the 50 destroyers for use in escorting convoys and protecting England's invasion-threatened coasts, the newspapers chorused that the announcement of the "swap" was the best news Britain has heard "since Dunkerque."

All sections of the press agreed that more important even than the exchange itself is the "spirit motivating it."

Some papers expressed belief that ultimate advantages of the deal to both Britain and the United States will be "more far-reaching than is indicated on the surface."

But they warned readers that the exchange does not mean that the United States is about to enter the war.

The Daily Telegraph, pulling no punches, said: "This epoch-making exchange is a blow to (Chancellor) Hitler's hopes for world domination." "America has given us a new sharp sword," said the Daily Express.

Washington Merry-Go Round

in key industries in dense and highly vulnerable locations. Factories in the interior were at a disadvantage, and the Army's buying methods operated against developing them.

The experts strongly advised that place of production and not destination be made the basis for bidding. This would develop interior plants and also, by increasing competition, have an important effect on keeping down prices.

HOG-TIED

Senator "The Man" Bilbo scored an easy primary victory last week (equivalent to election in Mississippi), but he didn't escape being heckled.

Some Mississippi voters wanted to know why Bilbo was traipsing around on the hustings and not in Washington voting on the important defense legislation.

This challenge didn't faze Bilbo a bit. Equipped with a ball-bearing tongue and imperturbable, he is never at a loss for an answer. Quick as a flash he shot back:

"I don't have to be in Washington. I've got things fixed up so I make my influence felt in the Senate whether I'm there or not. I've got a pair with Senator Bob Taft, the meanest, most reactionary Republican up there, and folks, that pair has got him tied up tighter than a tick. He can't do anything, because I've got him hog-tied for fair."

TALENTED PROTEGE

One of the greatest patronage wingers in American history was former Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, co-author of the famous Smoot-Hawley tariff act and now an apostle of the Mormon Church. As chairman for many years of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, he built up a network of high and low office-holding henchmen who permeated every agency of the Government.

One of Smoot's Utah proteges was Edgar B. Brossard, whom he installed on the Tariff Commission. Brossard has now been a Tariff Commissioner for 15 years at $10,000 a year. And although his patron, Smoot, was eliminated from the Senate in 1932, Smoot's example apparently is still fresh in Brossard's mind.

For he has quietly built up one of the juiciest nepotism fests in Washington. Being childless, Brossard has no children of his own on the government payroll. But a flock of nieces and nephews—eight, to be exact—draw government pay as follows:

1. Niece Barbara Brossard, stenographer, State Department, $1,800.
2. Niece Enid Brossard, stenographer, WPA $1,800.
3. Niece Greta J. Brossard, clerk, Surplus Commodities Corp. $1,440.
4. Niece Mrs. H. Stratford Brossard, stenographer, Federal Alcohol Administration $1,620.
5. Niece Mrs. E. J. Ceconi, stenographer, Foreign Agricultural Relations office $1,620.
6. E. J. Ceconi, Niece's husband, mail clerk, PWA, $1,440.
7. Nephew Boyd Brossard, clerk, Farm Security Administration $1,260.

ORIENT PUPILS PROTEST RULING

Parents Of 33 Youngsters Refuse To Send Boys, Girls To Scioto

Protesting action of the Scioto Township board of education in assigning pupils at the Orient grade school to the Scioto Township school at Commercial Point, 33 pupils reported at the Orient school, Tuesday, abandoned and left without a teacher by decree of the Scioto board at its June meeting.

Parents of the pupils asserted that their children would report at the vacant building each day until the Scioto Township board provided them with a teacher.

Scioto Township board members maintain their action was justified, since they had received two notices from the State Department of Education, one early in February and one in June, informing them that no funds would be provided for the Orient school, since enrollment was not sufficient to justify such an appropriation. Funds for the school amount to $1,150, part of which is provided by the state and part by a 3-mill tax levy within the school district.

Average daily attendance at the school last year was nine, according to reports from Superintendent George D. McDowell's office.

Scioto Township board members denied that they had ordered the school closed at their June meeting, maintaining that they merely had assigned Orient pupils to the Scioto Township school building at Commercial Point.

Ralph Francis, superintendent of Scioto Township school, stated Wednesday that there were adequate facilities and teachers at the Commercial Point building to handle all the Orient pupils. He pointed out that at present, there are two school buses which stop in Orient, and that all the pupils there have adequate transportation.

Scioto Township board members whose action was protested include President Virgil Hill, Vice-president Guy Gullick, Mrs. Marie Crawford, the Orient representative, William Beavers, and Miss Mable Thompson.

clerk, Farm Security Administration $1,440.

In the Who's Who in the Nation's Capital, Brossard notes his chief hobby as "Humanitarian work of encouraging and helping those in need of it."

CONGRESSIONAL NAMES

The name of Bankhead has been on the congressional roles uninterruptedly for more than half a century. Originator of the celebrated Alabama dynasty was the late Speaker John Bankhead, who served in both Houses from 1896 to 1920. Speaker William Bankhead, his son, has been in the House 24 years, and brother John has been a Senator since 1930 . . . With the exception of Jones—of which there are only two—congressional names are the same in frequency as in the average telephone book. Largest number of members with the same name are Smiths, with Johnsons second. Third place is a four-way tie among the Allens, Browns, Kennedys and Martins . . . Oddest name in Congress is that of Representative Edouard Victor Michel Izac of San Diego, Cal. Of French descent, Izac is an Annapolis graduate and holder of the Medal of Honor for exceptional bravery in the World War.

Safety Council To Meet Sept. 17-19 In Dayton, O.

An invitation to attend the second annual Ohio State Safety Council, to be held at the Biltmore Hotel, Dayton, September 17, 18 and 19, has been extended to Circleville and Pickaway County motorists by Judge Robert N. Gorman, president of the Ohio State Safety Council. The meeting will begin Tuesday, September 17th at 11 a. m. with the annual report of the president, followed by reports of other officers and the election of officers for the ensuing year.

HERE ARE FACTS ABOUT MEASURE SENT TO HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 — Salient provisions of the conscription bill being debated in the house today follow:

Male citizens and aliens from 21 to 44, inclusive, must register and are subject to draft. The senate approved a 21-31 draft.

Persons 18 to 35 may volunteer for 12-month training period.

Except in time of war, President's power to induct men under draft act is limited to 1,000,000. Senate approved 900,000 draft.

Draftees are subject to service in United States, insular possessions and Philippine Islands.

Bill is effective until May 15, 1945, except that each draftee is to remain in reserve for 10 years, or until he reaches 45.

College students wishing to finish their education are given deferment until end of academic year 1940-41, or until July 1, 1941.

If congress declares the national interest is in peril, the 12-month training period of draftee may be extended at the will of congress.

Base pay of privates including regular army, is raised from $21 to $30 a month after four months service.

Ministers and divinity students are exempt from draft, but not from registration.

Conscientious objectors relieved of combatant training.

Employers are required to reemploy draftees; also draftees right to vote is also guaranteed.

President is authorized to name local draft boards to be appointed on recommendation of governors of states.

Local boards are given power to determine questions of exemption and deferment of training.

States are to be assigned quotas, with each state entitled to credit for its citizens now serving in armed forces.

COOPERATION OF FARM FOLK ASKED BY WALLACE

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 4— Illinois farmers today had a warning from Henry A. Wallace, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, that they must cooperate fully with the administration's preparedness program or run the chance of becoming "serfs" in a Hitler-dominated world.

Addressing 5,000 persons in Bloomington yesterday, Wallace declared:

"A Hitler - dominated Europe means trouble and disaster for America. It means international slavery. If we have to deal with Hitler on his own terms and with the reichsmark as the medium of exchange, laborers and agriculturists will become serfs.

"You farmers must keep awake if we are to have adequate prices for corn and hogs. We want peace, and the only way to get it is by preparedness, not through pacifism."
